Coleman makes campaign stop in Fayetteville

Linda Coleman, Democratic nominee for Lt. Governor, visited an evening event at Ms. Barbara Spigner home in Fayetteville to meet with voters and prominent elected officials in the community. Ms. Coleman was received by a large crowd of enthusiastic supporters at the event and delivered her vision for North Carolina as the next Lt. Governor:

“As a former educator, I know that the door to opportunity and to the middle class is through education. We need a Lt. Governor with the experience and the understanding that our children cannot afford another billion dollars cut to education from our GOP-led legislature. We need a Lt. Governor who believes in public education and will fight for this generation and the next. My focus is to protect the future of our children and stand up for the middle class in this state.”

Linda Coleman also championed her idea of industry-based recruitment to spur job creation and economic development in every region of North Carolina. She said it was time to bring bi-partisanship leadership back to Raleigh and she has the record to deliver.

Coleman is poised to make history as the first African-American female ever elected to statewide office in North Carolina.
